Take your interest in international studies to the next level with a study abroad experience.

Whether you are looking to fulfill your global studies course requirements or gain firsthand insight into the political or economic climate of your host country, pursuing a study abroad experience is a great option for international studies students. Your classroom learning will be enhanced by real-life observations of life under different political, economic, and social systems, allowing you to apply what you learn in your courses to day-to-day life in your host community. Pursuing language courses abroad also helps you become more effective at cross-cultural communication. Being able to engage respectfully with people from different cultural, religious, and political backgrounds is a valued skill in a range of different career fields.

Are you looking for specific courses? Visit teanabroad.org/course-finder and we can help you find the program that meets your academic goals and course needs.
